

How often do You think about the threat of Nuclear War....

The Bulletin of Atomic Scientists have set their Doomsday Clock to 100 seconds before midnight, the closest we have ever come to Nuclear Annihilation. A nuclear war would end all hope of solving the issues behind climate change, of ending war and terrorism around the world, of electing a President who stands for the welfare of the people. Everything, all gone.

Both Barak Obama and Donald Trump have begun new programs to modernize and expand the U.S. Nuclear arsenal. These plans are unfolding as we speak. Under Vladimir Putin, Russia has also invested in modernization and restoration of the nuclear weapons arsenal.

According to the Plowshares Fund, 9 countries have 13,355 Nuclear Weapons, with the US and Russia holding 92% The US has withdrawn from nuclear treaties curtailing new development, short range and smaller Nukes. We are toe to toe with Russia right now in Syria and Ukraine. Nuclear armed India and Pakistan are once again rattling sabers over Kashmir.

Its time to draw . . .
